We actually
get your jokes

A guy walked into a bar with a small lizard sitting on his shoulder. He said to the bartender, "A double whiskey for me and," pointing to the lizard, "a half-pint of ale for Tiny here."

"Why do you call him Tiny?" asked the bartender.

"Obviously," the man answered, "because he's my newt."

[If you laughed (or winced) on your first read-through, you belong in Mensa! If you noted that a newt is actually an amphibian of the family Salamandridae and not a lizard, you probably already qualify and should consider joining at your soonest opportunity.]
